Prince George's County Mourns the Loss of One of the Region's Greatest Ambassadors

Prince George's County, MD- The Greater Prince George's Business Roundtable joins the entire community in its deep and profound sense of loss over the passing of former County Executive Wayne K. Curry.

Though Mr. Curry was the county's first African-American executive, his legacy is about far more than his career in elected office, as he has served as a tireless advocate on behalf of Prince Georgian's since his first days in elementary school in the county. He spoke his mind, always, on the issues that matter most to Prince Georgians and so many more throughout the state, and his candor, combined with his razor-sharp intellect and wit, made him a sought out voice on the issues of the day.

The Roundtable, of which Mr. Curry has been a long-time member, mourns the loss of Wayne Curry, but we proudly recognize his lifetime of accomplishments, all of which will forever be a part of the fabric of the history of Prince George's County.

His longtime friend and colleague in County Government, Roundtable President and CEO M.H. Jim Estep said, "Wayne Curry was a devoted and loving husband and father. There is not a single corner of Prince George's County that he hasn't touched and improved, and his legacy is evident in things that we see every day, from the Bowie Town Center and FedEx Field down to National Harbor, and his work for the past few months in educating so many on the dangers and impacts of lung cancer has potentially extended and saved lives. Make no mistake, this is a tremendous loss, but it is also a time to reflect on the lasting positive impacts one dynamic person can have on the community in which they live."

The Greater Prince George's Business Roundtable (GPGBR) is a non-profit, nonpartisan business alliance of Chief Executives, formed to improve our political, economic and community environments for a better Prince George's County. GPGBR is led by a Board of Directors, composed of concerned and active business leaders from the county and region, whose companies represent nearly 60,000 people, helping to strengthen our county and the region.
